John Hancock Life Insurance Company of New York
(hereinafter referred to as John Hancock New York or The Company)

What you should know about your John Hancock New York Loan Record-Keeping

Your John Hancock New York contract allows for loans to participants, provided loans are permitted under your plan. If your plan allows for loans and you select this option, there are certain features of John Hancock New York loan record keeping services which you should understand.

It is important to note that.....

The plan administrator is responsible for the administration of plan loans, underwriting the loan, setting the interest rates, for ensuring the loans are repaid according to the amortization schedules and determining if and when the loan is a deemed distribution. There are usually fees associated with taking a loan. Your Third Party Administrator may charge a loan issue fee. Check with your Plan Administrator.

John Hancock New York is responsible for the record-keeping of transfer loans and any new loans issued under your ARA contract. John Hancock New York charges a monthly record-keeping fee for any new loans issued under your ARA contract. John Hancock New York is not responsible for determining whether loans are allowed under the plan.

Please also be aware.....

Loan balances indicated on the amortization schedule will not agree exactly with the John Hancock New York loan balances. Minor discrepancies appear because:

- John Hancock New York begins to accrue interest on loans from the issue date of the check. The amortization schedule may not commence the accrual of interest until the day the check is received by the participant. This will result in a small discrepancy in the interest figures.
- John Hancock New York compounds interest daily, while most amortization schedules compound interest on a monthly or semi-monthly basis. This again can result in a small discrepancy between your loan balance and ours.
- John Hancock New York accrues interest until the date the loan payment is received, while you may cease to accrue interest on the date the actual payroll deduction occurs. You may be able to eliminate delays resulting in the accrual of additional interest by making your payments through direct debit in conjunction with John Hancock New York's electronic file creation options.

If there is a minor discrepancy between your records and ours, your amortization schedule will govern. That is, if your records indicate that a loan is paid in full, and John Hancock New York records indicate a small outstanding balance, we will consider the loan to be paid in full.
